Date: 12/17/98

Page: 1

JFK ASSASSINATION SYSTEM IDENTIFICATION FORM

AGENCY INFORMATION

AGENCY :

0-0-0 104-10433-10057 RECORD NUMBER :

RECORD SERIES : JFK

AGENCY FILE NUMBER : RUSS HOLMES WORK FILE

DOCUMENT INFORMATION

Released under the John

. Kennedy

Assassination Records Collection Act of 1992

(44 USC 2107 Note). Case#:NW 53216 Date:

D6-08-2017

ORIGINATOR : CIA

FROM :

TO:

TITLE : MEMO: VIEWS OF SIDNEY LENS ON DOMESTIC RACIAL SITUATION

DATE : 10/05/67

PAGES : 13

SUBJECTS: LENS, SIDNEY

DOCUMENT TYPE : PAPER, TEXTUAL DOCUMENT

CLASSIFICATION : SECRET

RESTRICTIONS : OPEN IN FULL POSTPONED IN FULL

CURRENT STATUS : OPEN

DATE OF LAST REVIEW : 12/17/98

OPENING CRITERIA :

JFK-RH19:F05 1998.12.17.10:13:38:543129: ORIGINAL PREVIOUSLY SANITIZED COMMENTS:

DOCUMENT

	305	APPI	IALS REVIEW	FORM
rab	1-41 contains M	-mo -	NO 77	(lated 50	t. 1967.
()	Previously denied	in toto	under exemp	tion(s)		of
(/)	Segregable portion under (b)(1)	ons previo	ously release	ed; excised p	portions exer	apted IPS
	Located during th
().	Referred to DDO f	or review	by			• ther description, This memo C ATT. #I mentio
	ECOMMEND:			77.3.	. * .
	Sustain initial d () ADD exemption () DROP exemptio	(s)	toto under	exemption(s)	- ·	of
8	Sustain initial exempted under (1) ADD exemption (1) DROP exemption	(I) (B)(sanitized 3) (-bi/6)	version with of .		tions
()	Release additiona	1 informa	tion with ex	xcised portio	ons exempted	under ()	Deny document in	toto unde	r exemption	(s)	(of
	Release a sanitiz	ed versio	n with exci	sed portions	exempted und	ler
The	exemptions cited	above are	being claim	ned to protec	t the follow	wing:
	Location of una Name of CIA emp File number Pseudonym Cryptonym Internal organiza Name of FBI age FBI file number Privacy of other OTHER	ining to ining to ining to ining to overseas cknowledge loyee tional da nt individua	a foreign liuld identify a source intelligence installation domestic	iaison relati y the source e methods on installation
Pan Pan	IENTS and/or SPECI.	atty Vi	total sour	They The a	Borne, Re	det fee
)uri us  	ng the DDO classi	tication ;	review, this	accument wh	ich was mark	.ea maintained classified to declassified desensitized downgraded to

E2 IMPDET CL BY 012170

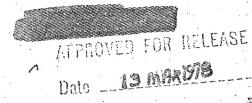

1 T COSETORIST (A)

TTI TOP SECRE

on Decestic Recial Situation and the Hew Politics Convention Viowa SUBJECT:

raid that the Black Coucus and the CFUSA had virtually wrecked the Convention, yet the Commists had fulled to get the Convention's support for a King-Spock or some other third ticket in the 1968 presidential elections, which the Communisto were very enger to obtain.

3.

5.

7. remained a strong edwirer of Dr. Martin Luther King, who he felt had make many mistrices in his Chicago operations, but who nevertheless was a sincare leader who maintained his charisma over the black masses, despite the demagogic behavior of the leaders of the smaller black endremist groups.

In eny case, strongly believed that King had the possibility of playing a future role of great importance in the black community.

8.

9.

10.

11. The Bureau may pass the above report to appropriate field offices for Beckground Use Caly.

5-19

SUBJECT: Views on Deseath Recial Situation and the New Politics Convention said that the Black Caucus/and the CPUSA had virtually wrecked the Convention, yet the Communists had failed to get the Convention's support for a King-Spock or some other third ticket in the 1968 presidential elections, which the Communists were very eager to obtain.

1.

2.

3.

4.

5.

APPROVED FOR RELEASE

Date __19 AUG 1976

S-19 NW 53216 DocId:32397374 Page 5

(41)

6.

7. remained a strong admirer of Dr. Martin Luther King, who he felt had made many mistakes in his Chicago operations, but who nevertheless was a sincere leader who maintained his charisms over the black masses, despite the demagogic behavior of the leaders of the smaller black extremist groups.

In any case, strongly believed that King had the possibility of playing a future role of great importance in the black community.

8./

9.

10.

11. The Bureau may pass the above report to appropriate field offices for Background Use Coly.

S-19

STORY.

LUMIECT: Views of Sidney Lens on Ithestic Racial Situation - and the New Politics Convention

- 1. Sliney Lens was extremely possimistic about the present political elimation in the United States. He believed that the growing racial strife was bringing about the breakup of the American Liberal concensus, revealing the "cynicism and hypocrisy" of the American power structure. He wondered whether liberal reforms to head off a violent domestic simile and inevitable repression of black militants and left liberals and radicals were even lossible. He believed that some sort of vast conspiracy on the right might be already undersay to destroy American democracy.
- 2. Lens' state of degression might in part be explained by the failure of the New Politics Convention, with which Lens was greatly involved. He maid that the Plack Caucus and the CPUSA had virtually wrecked the Convention, yet the Communists had failed to get the Convention's support for a King-Spock or some other third ticket in the 1950 presidential elections, which the Communists were very easer to obtain.
- during the subser by massive sums of roney moving into the pockets of known black nationalist leaders, youth gang leaders and certain local politicians. This operation, to keep Chicago "cool", had been successful, but had also produced much cynicism emong ordinary black people who were beginning to understand at last what went on and to feel abused by such treatment. Lens believed that conditions were such that Black people in Chicago could not full to protect militantly in the future, and perhaps not only during hot weather. The black community, he maintained, showed great colidarity, despite its divisions. According to Lens, not one Hegro sniper was cought or denounced during the sugger.
- 4. Lems said he had been able to maintain fairly good contacts with many Negroes in the ghettoes and with black intellectuals, and he seemed to have a fairly self-confident idea of what was going on within the black community.
- 5. He maintained that white radicals in general, however, had virtually no influence inside the Chettoes and that the Daly machine was more influential than the Progressive Labor, the CMUSA or the Cocialist Workers Party. He large nothing about RAM's influence, if any, but said that the center of black nationalist activity seemed at present in the West Carrield area.

5-19

CONSUGED ON 28 14 1978 41

E 2 IMPUET OL BY 060575

- 6. Concerning any possible black conspiracy on a nationwide scale, Lens thought this was nonsense. These between groups and leaders had been reported to him as loose, with many feuds between them, Lens said. He added that he had heard of no international contacts by black nationalists, except the well-known tries abroad of MICC leaders.
- 7. Ions remained a strong admirer of Er. Martin Euther King, who he felt had made many mistakes in his Chicago operations, but who nevertheless was a sincere leader who maintained his charisms over the black rasses, despite the demagogic behavior of the leaders of the smaller black extremist groups. On the other hand, Lens felt that Nev. James Bevel was often excatic and even irresponsible in his actions. In any case, Lens strongly believed that King had the possibility of playing a future role of great importance in the black community.
- 8. Lons said he had heard nothing from the organizars of the Stockholm Conference on Vietnem, which he had attended, and wondered if any efforts at all were being made by the Continuing Committee of the Conference to develop peace initiatives. He said that he had never heard from the Latin Americans who had proposed in Stockholm that U.S. and Latin American peace militants hold a meeting somewhere in the near future. Lens thought they had dropped the idea, which was to have been concretized through him, as chairman of the American Delegation in Stockholm, but could not understand why.
- 9. Speaking of his associates in the prace novement, he call that Staughton Lynd, although a member of the editorial board of Liberation, never consulted him about enything. Perhaps, Lons felt, this was because Lynd was very hostile to any proposals for electoral action, while hens was not. As for Dave Dellinger, Lons said he did not understand what Dellinger was up to these days. Dellinger, he maintained, had assumed an "equivocal attitude" to the pacifist principles he had believed in until the death of A.J. Muste. Lons said he had never heard Dellinger explain himself or his projects.
- 10. Attached is a hand-out of a paper entitled "Game Thoughts on the NCIP Conference" written by Lens, and a copy of a press release containing Lens' statement on his return to the States from the Stockholm Conference on Vietness, 6-9 July 1967.
- 11. The Bureau may pass the above report to empropriate field offices for Background Use Only. It is requested no direct action be taken against the Subject on the basis of the contents of this report without prior consultation with this Agency. This restriction may be considered withdrawn one month after fource's departure from the United States, although the fact that these statements were made by Subject should continue to be considered restricted.

0-19

SOUR THORETTE OF THE HORE COMMERCED

Sidney Lone 5436 Eyen Park Blvd. Chicago, Illinois 60615

- The Conference was a noble attempt to bring about a coalition of three groups which departally shared a common political peropagative for remaking America in a new hold, but disagreed wather strongly on short term strategies for achieving it. One group, believing the povement was still too weak to neuma a dramatic national action in the electoral field, wanted to concentrate on organizing community groups as a sort of on-going Vietnam Summer. A second group felt that 1960 offered an exceptional opportunity for a breakthrough to hundreds of thousands who were not yet aligned with the movement, and suggested that in addition to protest and resistance a new type of Presidential campaign, concentrating less on votes and more on sinking roots, would widen the movement's influence appreciably. A third group, the Black Camous, sympathized with both strategies but believed that before a meaningful coalition could be built, Black Americans must first concentrate on creating their own separate identity and power base.
- 2. The young people planning the Conference had four alternatives before them: (a) to bring together solely those who believed in community organizing as the concentration point for the next year, and develop strategy for accelerating that campaign; (b) to bring together those who wanted to emphasize electoral action to plan strategy for the Presidential year and perhaps choose a Presidential ticket; (c) to hold three simultaneous conferences of the three constituencies at the Conference and arrange a structure by which the three groups would live in one house, with antenonous leadership and structure, but with machinery for collaboration and mutual aid when there was agreement to do so; (d) hold a single conference but evolve, as was done, a leadership which is based on two sets of parties, between the community organizers and the electoral wings on the one hand, and between both of these and the Black Caucus on the other.
- 3. The conference planners did a laudatory job of assuring democratic representation and demogratic expression, but it seems to no that the effort reflected an immature form of participative denocracy. Alternatives (a), (b), and (c) above gave considcrably more hope for a nature participatory democracy than altermative (d). It was clear in advance that no common strategy would be wrought out of the divergent strategical perspectives represented at the Conference, and it was a mistake to call people tegether on such a basis. The SDS model was followed, in my opinion, too schematically. SDS is an organization composed of a single stratum of the population, the students, who find the MSA and similar moderate institutions too confining. NCHP, on the other hand is not, and will not be for some time, anything but a coalition of groups made up of members of many stratums. The task here is much more difficult. Eventually the coalition will blend into an organization, but it was premature to think it could be born that way. Staughton Lynd and Rennic Davis were

- wight in this respect, though I think they were wrong in their other with point, energiesation of the value of goographic enclude nation (e.g. JOIN) as against functional engagination, (e.g. Would's Strike for Peace of Trade Unlegiste for Peace).
- The coalition that came out of the Conference is a tempous one, That it did not disintegrate before being been dees exedit to the sense of dedication that existed arranget the 3,000 partition No matter how angry each of us became over this or that point (in all three caususes) there was a general and healthy realization that we had no place else to go, that the marriage had to be maintained no matter what the fifficulties; But in the cool light of tonourow it would be wise for the national board to consider the realities of the situation: namely that there were three distinct wings to the house we built. There is ruch more hope of survival for an MCMP which would have three automorous sections, coordinating their work and coalescing only where agreement can be reached, than under the present form. I would strongly suggest that the Board consider setting up three separate bodies within NCNP, a community organizing group, an electoral politics group, and a Black organizing group, each with its own leadership. The Board night also consider asking the Maticaal Mobilization to End the War in Vietnam, to become the fourth autoenomous body. Coalities between these four groups would be practiced through a small governing board of six, one from each of the non-Black groups and three from the Black, to work out joint action where joint action is feasible, and to join in common pro-jects such as raising and allocating monies. The present Board is an improvement over the provious one in that it note accurately reflects the currents in the novement. But it is not the final form; a more viable one can be found along the hines suggested here, I think.
- It would be wrong to enaggerate the three issues that caused friction, namely the 13 points, the Foreman metions, and the 20,000 Black Caucus vote. The fact that there was no major walkout indicates how strongly the delegates were united philosophically and how overriding was the desire to maintain unity. the long run, if we build a healthy MCNP, these issues will be forgotten or washed away by healthier forms of collaboration. But precisely because we hope to coalesce more fruitfully we must analyze mistakes. It was wrong for the Black Caucus to insist that the 13 points be accepted without changing a comma; the three points that were in dispute could easily have been worked out to everyone's satisfaction, particularly if subcommittees of the Black Caucus and the Steering Committee had sat down and discussed it for a half hour. I am aware of the psychological overtones behind this issue and also aware of the problems within the Black Caucus with those who opposed formation of the coalition altogether. Nonetheless we must weigh this against the loss of credibility suffered by the vast majority who voted to endorse, say, ALL the resolutions of the Newark Black Power Conference without having read any of them. Foreman's speech had the mexit that it relaxed tensions between Black and White approciably, but it was a mistake for him-even jocularly -- to intheduce parts of his speech as resolutions and vote on them without discussion. For instance, while I favor the boycott of General; Motors for doing business with South Africa, I might have proferred a boycott against Standard Oil as being more againgful.

Finally, weighting the vote for the Black Caucus to achieve party was a mistake not because of the number of votes assigned (the number could have been bigger as far as I was concerned) but because it was a bloc vote, making the discussion and vote of all other people invalevant. Even nove distastable was the demogray used by some who spoke on this matter from the floor. It could have been presented calmly as an expedient or a computation; it did not have to be sold with this kind of inflaued and false whetonic:

- A move significant wealtness stems from the different needs of the three constituencies which nade up the Conference. The community organizers and the Blacks appeal to eitietis who are encuable to radical plans. The electoral group, on the other hand, radical itself, nonetheless must appeal to many who are far none moderate. No real effort was made to help this group in that tack. action people-sin the National Mobilization, for instance-shave solved the problem through the policy of "non-enclusion". The April 15th deponstration included the whole political rainbow from reform democrats to left revolutionaries, but non-exclusion had as a corrolary a relatively moderate platform. This was a wise decision, for I think history proves that radical action is stymicd unless it can draw the liberal constituency in its direction. Even the Russian Revolution (or the American) would have been impossible if millions of the followers of Dan, Kerensky and other moderates were not drawn along with Lenin (and in the American Revolution hundreds of thousands of moderate morehants, farmers and lawyers were drawn along with Sam Adams and his Sons of Liberty). We did not make it possible here to pull along with us the innumerable liberals reving to the left who are looking for a new home. A slate of King-Spock might have achieved this. But radical delegates, with whom I aguee politically, refused to consider that there was a world beyond the Palmer House in which we are a tiny minority. Tens of millions are against the war in Victor and against racism, but they are opponents of war and injustice out of liberal motivations, not radical ones. We can not win them by spouting phrases, but by building bridges. Eing-Spock, perhaps McKissick-Spock, or Spock-Rev. C.T. Vivian, might have built such bridges. I urgo the new Board to review this nat-I'm sure that in a calm, small meeting it will ter once again. come up with bridge-building formulas that will make our very radicalism infinitely more effective.
- 7. MCNP is now a babe in swaddling clothes, soon-hepefully-to begin walking. I'm impressed by the fact that the delegates left for home semewhat puzzled, somewhat disappointed, but with a total absence of rancor. This is a humanistic state of mind in which a movement can be built. We must not lose the opportunity. Ingenious mechanisms for participation and leadership must be evolved now so that tens of thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, can be brought into this movement. The coalities did not quite jell at the Palmer House, but it didn't fly apart either. It can be built.

That Paller on Its Google

ption, insued the following statement today on his return for the interior halm Conference on Victory and private tells with spelecture for Heath Victory and the Batteral Liberation Front both in Coefficient and Paris. His Lone, representing the Chirage Peace Council, and the Policyality of Recommendation, was the chairmen of the France Remains delegation to the interestant conference called by six world-wide peace reversity.

The statement is no fellows:

The Horth Victory spotsesson, with whem I held private talks, subjected is due to advise the American public that there is only one condition for initiating negotiations to end the war--not many conditions as the American public has been led to believe. The United States rust only step the best-ing of North Vietnam and Issue an eight word statement to that affects. "We have stopped the bombing of North Vietnam." He mare, the applicance told me, is required. The United States does not have to use the term "unconditional" or "permanents"

What we are interested in," he said, "is the deed-ending of the bombing and the confollous".

He did not pin down the time it would take for talks to begin, but implied it would be a few weeks.

Anomolous as it counds this soft position on negotiations was accompaned by a tougher and nero confident attitude toward the year. World-Femous experts on Vietnam, such as Philippo Devillers, France's forement authority on Vietnam, told no that they haven't beard the MLY or North Vietnam as confident or as determined for quite a few years.

factors, both political and military. Politically, they say, large numbers of people who were proviously associated with the Unified Buddhist Church are looked hope of finding any colution encept with the Front and are exaling ever to it in very considerable numbers. I may say that this estimate has been confirmed to me by a completely reliable religious racified leader, an American, who recently spoke with the top Buddhist leaders in Schrou. It was also confirmed by a key Buddhist ment with them I excluse the Rushes.

On the military front the ME spekeemen say that they have wen two decimine victorion in the last four conthe which have convinced them that Etalan farcon, They call the im of the limiting of the fitting of the fitting constant total "Themesi" for the fontagen. "The restatence atwards of the people and every of Earth Violana [illy] has accord violation moves some in biotoxy," they gaid.

more than open open there is exist always a most opened process a policy of more than the Dollinger, had an opportunity a few weeks ago to interview Victoriance colders in Parel who had fought at Junction City. They told him that the U.S. had used $5,000 troops, of when 14,000 had been "put out of action," and lost hundreds of the 850 trades at their disposal, many of them to unow ploded U.S. bombs which the Viet Cong had refachiened into minos. The defeat of American forces there, these soldlors said, made results the offensive at the description and forced the U.S. to withdraw troops from the Mokeng Dolta, where a U.S. companies had been projected. Dellinger was told: "If they couldn't conquer us at Junction City, they can't conquer us at all."

The HLF leaders asserted to our American delegation that the HLF controls 80 percent of the territory of South Vietnam and 10 million of the 1/4 million people. When an American said that these figures are much larger than those indicated by the U.S. government, the official said that the HLF has copies of CIA reports which put the figure even higher.

The North Victorians who apoles about regetiations also neld a long and frank conversation with me on strategy. Both the North and the Hif, he said, feeed a major problem of adjustment and reorganization up to the point where the U.S. armics reached 250,000. I got the impression he considered this a difficult period. "Now," he said, "we are resty for anything, regardless of how far the escalation goes." He laughed at the prespect of a United States invasion at the 21st parellel, near Vinh, the co-called thin needs of Both Victorian. He would not go into detail but he stated that the United States would get the "were corpsises" of the war if it undertook such action.

hombing of the dyles, but he insisted that Hamei has made plans for that too.

The North Viotnesses and that despite the human casualties authord from the bearing, both industry and agriculture in 1966 rose sementionally from the provious years. The "value of engineering output," he caid, "has increased by 29.7 percent." The rice harvest, he claimed, was "one of the beat" in his story. It may be "strange" to American care, he insisted, but nator this this A lection years: 3, 0,000 and relations add with adjust and in the native of 150 percent as commend to the salest year lecter the state ancelection.

rearrage rare from mate into them of large here. That each alog is of

In contrast to the COO American planes look that have been admitted by the Pentagon, the North Vietnamese may that have shot down 2.050.

They deprecated American claims of success in beating his country's millitary barracks: "Do you think we're deed enough to have our soldiers live in barracks?" they noted.

The NLF applearan, in addressing the American delegation, was even more disparaging of U.S. efforts. "If all the cannalities claimed by the U.S. were true," he said, "there would be none of as left. Fut as you see we're growing stronger every day."

Ho called the American policy one of "burn all, Hill all, destroy all. He accused the U.S. of perpetrating "hundreds of Lidicos." Neverthaloss he said that when the U.S. claims to have rounded up large numbers of Viet Cong in a village it is usually old men and children.

So far as I know every member of our American delegation was greatly surprised by the obvious self-confidence of the Vietnamers. They had not expected it. The Vietnamers neither beasted nor farmed.

In the private talks I held I got the impression that this self-assurance was convine, not revely to impress the Conference. But I had the even more pervasive feeling that Borth Vietnam in particular felt that the initiation of negotiations would be very simple if the United States real-ly wanted it. The North Vietnamese went out of their way to make it clear that there were not many conditions for talks but a single one. At one point a Borth Vietnamese speke to so for a half hour about the different "road to socialism" being followed by Hanei as against all other communist countries, and of the considerable difference between the Vietnamese and Chinese character. "Don't forget," he said, "our people are true individualists."

The implication was clear that Hanei had no intention of becoming anyone's pupper. He also reminded no that despite the fact that his country had fought a long, bitter war with the French, relations with France new were good.